FIFA: France is beaten by England!

As England beats France at 6 to 4, English people wonder why they didn't get the world cup but lost to Argentina. As Tom Neill, one assistant of OXNN said, "When England wins one goal, they don't try to win more: they try to defend their goal until the end", and "Ironically, this means that if they had won that goal a bit later, maybe they would have won!"

When Tom says "that goal", we need add some context. When England and Argentina were playing, England, they quite early, won a goal, and then they tried to defend it, but at the end of the match Argentina won two goals.

But then we wonder why England won with France and got a lot more than one goal. Maybe it is because England only played like that when it was stressed, e.g. in the semi finals when they were playing with Argentina.

English people will be happy, however, when we verify that Argentina, their enemy, was defeated, by Spain, by 0 to 1.

UKRAINE-Russian war: Federov's

sacking explained

Last time, we reported that Ukraine's president, Zelensky, removed the popular defence minister Federov, and there were protests around Zelensky's working place. It has now been revealed that there was a conflict between country's army commander-in-chief Syrskyi and him.

Zelensky has now been forced to sack Syrskyi too, and he will be replaced by Mykhailo Drapatyi, a popular battle-hardened general. He is also thought to be a close friend of Federov, and Federov congratulated him on his job.

IRAN-us war: cost of this war

The Iran-US war has already used $37.5bn (£28bn), from US Defence Secretary Pete Hegseth, and the US are trying to get 87 more billions. Actually, this is just a lower bound for the real cost, because 3 other sources say that this doesn't include costs like construction for damaged American bases.

Most American democrats are opposed to this, and after Hegseth asked democrats for more funding, they said that it "does not make a lot of sense", and asked why he was asking for tens of billions of dollars for a war the president said had already been won.

WEIRD news: new monkey species discovered in DR Congo forest!

There has been a new monkey species discovered in the DR Congo forest in Africa! It has striking pinkish-orange lips like this! People working there saw this monkey in 2008, but captured only one blurry photograph. When people saw it again in 2018, an international team set out to find the monkey.

They revealed that it was a previously unknown species. However, some locals knew of this monkey's existence and already called it Likweli. But, Amboko, the leading person in the research, and a PhD student at Florida Atlantic University, said it was "kind of shy".

This is only the fifth African monkey discovered in the last 75 years. The team called it "Colobus congoensis", colobus meaning a species of African monkeys with no thumbs, and congoensis from Congo, as it was from the DR Congo forest!

TOXIC chemicals detected in three illegal waste sites

A toxic mix of hundreds of chemicals has been detected at three of the largest illegal waste dumps in the UK. Over the last six months, Sky news worked with scientists to test air, water and soil at these sites.

In one of these sites, 100,000 tonnes of waste where festering for more than 7 years, and the air has four times as many chemicals as emissions from a car. This dump also regularly burns, and fire crews were called to the site. Another 55,000 tonne site had a lot of pesticide thanite and carbon tetrachloride, another had P-tert amylphenol and pesticide demeton-O.

In all of those sites, a very toxic chemical used in plastics was found in the water: Triisopropyl phosphate. Perhaps what people are doing now is best summarised by sky news:

The Environment Agency said its scientists will "carefully consider these findings", adding that "waste crime is an absolute disgrace that harms our communities and blights our environment".

"That's why we're taking tougher action than ever before to crack down on the criminal gangs behind it," a spokesperson added.

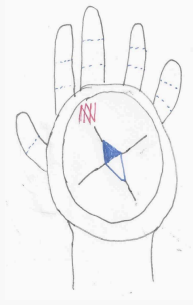

"Through our Waste Crime Action Plan, we're giving the Environment Agency police-style powers, investing £45m to boost enforcement, and making criminals pay for the damage they cause."
